How Do You Not Care About Obama's War on Journalism? The White House is targeting media outlets with their massive surveillance program in an all-out assault on press freedom. We are now living in an age where the powerful have become the White House, where the press is being co-opted and weakened, and where the people's right to know is being undermined. Such a war on the First Amendment is tantamount to nothing less than a rebellion against democracy. The White House's assault on the media is a key part of an all-out war on the American people itself. All of this took place while the White House was claiming that they only target "low-level [communications]." That was clearly a lie. This is the new world of spying and it's a world we're all now living in. And it's a world where the president and his colleagues lie to us about every aspect of what they do. They see nothing wrong with tricking the Congress and the public into believing they are only targeting information about terrorists. The White House released a statement saying that they have no intention of banning any outlet and that any restrictions are motivated by "specific facts and circumstances." But in a war of lies, the White House needs to come up with specific lies to tell. Otherwise we all know the rest. They would also be lying if they told us that they had not come up with certain news outlets to be targeted based on their "knowledge of their activities." The White House is going to be targeting specific outlets based on their operations. This can only be based on their political leanings. The White House is targeting certain outlets not based on criminal or even anti-social activities. They are targeting them based on their political views. This is precisely what Obama and his allies are calling "thought policing." It's banning people based on their opinion — not based on any real crime. Obama and his allies have labeled the American First Amendment "the right to speak one's mind." That's not even the right that the government has to protect. The First Amendment is the right that the government should protect against others. Only people who share the views and values of the White House are allowed to stay. Under Obama and his allies, it's all about political correctness. Those who don't share their views are Genomic structure and organization of the GAD45 gene locus on chromosome 2p23. Type II diabetes mellitus is a highly heterogeneous disease having a complex polygenic inheritance pattern. The majority of type II diabetic patients have early age onset and show insulin resistance and/or beta-cell dysfunction. Previously we reported localization of a type II diabetes mellitus susceptibility locus, IDDM1, to 2p23-p25 in a Japanese population (Behringer, M., Horikoshi, K., Nielsen, T.A., Ogawa, K., Reisman, G.A., Fox, R.E., Rubin, R.J. and Schadt, E.L. (1996) Hum. Mol. Genet. 5, 661-668). The locus showed a strong linkage association with the GAD67 and IA-2 genes and a polymorphism in a recently described IDDM2 gene. Here we present the characterization of the chromosomal region by physical mapping. The region harboured the GAD45 gene encoding the 45-kDa islet cell antigen. The GAD45 gene (formerly designated as PFP) was mapped to the region by fluorescence in situ hybridization. We identified three PFP transcripts (1.0, 1.9 and 2.7 kb in size). The larger transcripts were found in pancreatic islet, liver and brain but the shorter ones were exclusively expressed in pancreas. Both the transcripts had an open reading frame of 224 bp encoding a protein of 75 amino acids. The genomic organization of the GAD45 gene is similar to that of the cyclin D1 and phosphatase 5a genes. Analysis of meiotic recombination events in a pedigree allowed us to assign a minimal critical interval between GAD45 and IDDM1. We showed that the IDDM1 marker locus at 2p23-25 is not linked to the GAD45 gene locus. These data suggest that multiple genes may be involved in the development of type II diabetes and that IDDM1 and GAD45 are two distinct disease loci. Jason Derulo Is Getting Married!
