A new technique of anterior cruciate ligament graft fixation in single bundle anterior cruciate ligament reconstruction using two tunnel through-and-press technique. The aim of this study was to evaluate the clinical and radiological results of a new technique of anterior cruciate ligament graft fixation in single bundle anterior cruciate ligament reconstruction using two tunnels through-and-press technique. Between May 2012 and December 2012, 28 patients who underwent single bundle anterior cruciate ligament reconstruction using bone-patellar tendon-bone were included in the study. Surgical technique consisted of two tunnel in-and-out technique through two methods. An outside-in graft with the intra-articular ends being first positioned through the tunnel and then the bone stump was passed out of the tunnel. The press was then pushed through the tunnel and inserted into the pre-chosen tibial and femoral insertion sites. The average follow-up time was 22 months (range, 16 to 32 months). All patients were evaluated clinically with International Knee Documentation Committee (IKDC) and Tegner-Lysholm scoring system. X-rays were taken to determine the center of rotation (COR). The mean IKDC score was 78.86 points (range, 69 to 89 points). Mean Tegner-Lysholm score was 97.86 points (range, 90 to 100 points). The mean side-to-side difference in anterior laxity was 1.3 ± 1.2 mm. According to the radiological evaluation, the average COR was 4.83 ± 1.07 mm anterior to the posterior cruciate ligament. At the final follow-up, all patients were able to resume their pre-injury activity level. In single bundle anterior cruciate ligament reconstruction with an outside-in bone-patellar tendon-bone graft technique, by using the bone-patellar tendon-bone graft, the double-press technique for tibial and femoral fixation and the two tunnels in-and-out technique, all variables were better compared to the other techniques in terms of stability, graft tensioning, and graft to bone-tendon fixation. Après avoir déclaré l'état d'urgence à Calais, le gouvernement français a changé sa politique et décidé de procéder à des évacuations dans l'Hexagone, une première
